ENM launches its new logo

We are delighted to reveal ENM's new logo developed in collaboration with the amazing Anthony Behrens of Swamphing. Anthony consulted with our staff and management committee to create a stunning visual which represents who we are as an organisation now.

The logo shows the Manawatū River, and its tributaries cutting through the island's great divide - the Ruahine and Tararua mountain ranges. It represents the work done by ENM and its member groups on both sides of these ranges, with the river network flowing through, and connecting us all together.

Over the next few months you will see this logo being incorporated into our communications, our website, into building signage, letterheads and business cards. We are really proud of the final product, which also seems like a notable way to mark 21 years of communication, cooperation and advocacy in the environmental sector.

Celebrating Volunteering.

Jess Haigh-Knuth has always had a heart for volunteering and when she saw a post from Te pātaka kai 4412 needing volunteers a few months ago, it immediately made sense to her. Jess helps out at TPK 4412 once or twice a week and in the holidays her oldest child is also down there sorting food for whānau...

Manawatū River Source to Sea Meetings an opportunity to keep current.

Manawatū River Source to Sea meetings take place 1st Wednesday of every month and are an opportunity for individuals passionate about water and biodiversity in the Manawatū River Catchment to connect, network and listen to a guest speaker of interest. Last month the meeting welcomed Julia Ryan who presented on the Wairarapa long tail bat monitoring program.

The Egg Project supporting Ruahine Kiwi

The Egg Project has been doing a sterling job supporting the Ruahine Kiwi Project by setting up a system where customers can donate eggs to the cause for trapping predators. Business owner Pip Ferguson is delighted to be involved. 'We love supporting local initiatives and with both Brian and I growing up here and both loving the outdoors and the bush, it was a no brainer that we wanted to help. Also having the eggs that were required made it super simple and there was no doubt that our Egg Eaters would want to get behind it as well.....we are proud to be supporting the (Project) and the community that is involved with it!'

You can find out more about their work with Ruahine Kiwi on our website donations page.

4412 Kai Resilience Project receives a welcome funding boost.

The project which is now in its implementation stage has just received welcome support from the Lottery Community Fund and the Horizons Regional Council Community Climate Response Fund for key projects linked to it.

Andrew Watt, who is the Kairuruku Hohenga Āhuarangi/Climate Action Coordinator for Horizons notes 'Localised food production and food security can both reduce transport emissions and increase community resilience to climate change. The growing gardens and communities mahi will also produce co-benefits of healthy kai and empowering whānau to grow their own kai. Horizons Regional Council are pleased to offer support for this project through the first funding round of the Pūtea Hapori Urupare Ahuarangi,-Community Climate Response Fund.'

Our sincere thanks to these funders for their partnership.

Te Kāuru, who partner with Manawatū River Source to Sea in delivering the Ruahine Kiwi project have been doing some incredible work alongside Te Kura Kaupapa Māori o Tamaki Nui a Rua, assisting them in the delivery of the first "Hangarau Mātauranga Māori ki te kura" which is led by Hākui Sharon Paewai, and delivered to all year 7 & 8s. Skills taught included trap building, river crossing skills, pest ID to name a few and the program was delivered fully in Te Reo Māori!
